1. A barrier (sparr) had been placed across the Daugava River immediately north of the northern sea approach to the Daugavgriva's naval harbor. The passage through the barrier was marked with a red and white buoy with only a ship's width between them.
2. A demagnetizing station in an old ship was located on the east Daugava shore about 1,500 meters south of the arm of the river which leads to Milgravis. A submarine was being demagnetized at the station. (See sketch)
